

Around 200 people crammed into the Captain's Club Hotel in Christchurch to hear Nigel Farage, William Dartmouth and Stephen Booth talk about the EU and its effects upon business. A buzzing meeting listened and questioned the speakers thoroughly and enjoyed some superb catering with the odd glass of wine or two! A large number of non-members attended and as experienced at the New Forest's Lyndhurst meeting a good number signed up for UKIP, whilst others are now clear who to vote for next time round. See some of the speeches using the links on page 3.

On the subject of events don't forget it is November 5th on the first Saturday of the month – time for the annual bonfire night celebrations at John Baxter's home in Longham. Loads of food and drink plus the enjoyable experience of seeing an EU guy consumed in the flames! What more could you want for £7.50 [£4 optional concessions]. Ring/email for your reservation now. Location details in the diary.

If somehow you missed Nigel Farage in both Christchurch and Lyndhurst you have a third and final chance to see him locally this year. Salisbury UKIP is holding an evening event on Thursday 1st December [whoops – a First-Thursdays clash!] at 7.30pm in the Guildhall, Market Place, Salisbury, SP1 1JH. Although directed at non-members a few places are available for members of any branch. Just turn up, there is no need to book.

Still a limited number of places for the meeting at the Carrington Hotel in Bournemouth to see and hear London UKIP MEP Gerard Batten. One of the most clued up persons in the country about EU policy. See the diary for details of this prestigious event. No need to book, just turn up.

Trevor Coleman's Th-EU-nit continues to detail the legislation etc that is being spewed out by the EU. See them all at <http://www.th-eu-nit.com/>. So much to read we suggest you find a way to go on line and see it all for yourself. Take some tranquilisers or blood pressure pills before you do – or have a very large brandy to hand for afterwards!

“This motion calls upon the government to introduce a bill in next session of Parliament to provide for the holding of a referendum on whether the UK should remain a member of the EU on the current terms, leave the EU, or renegotiate the terms of its membership in order to create a new relationship based on trade and cooperation.” This was the motion debated in Westminster on what some are calling the new Black Monday, 24th October. The Conservatives, Lib-Dem and Labour 3 line whip made a free vote on this subject impossible, with the highest implications for you and your country. They claimed it was the wrong time for this vote – indeed it always will be for them! It is very much the right time as the EU budget for the next 7 years is about to be set, and had a free vote gone against the government Cameron's negotiating hand would have been greatly strengthened. His actions have made Cameron's credentials as a 'eurosceptic' untenable. The sceptics in his party must now leave in droves. The LibDems and Labour, being good little EUropeans, voted for the most part as expected. Well done to 1500 Ukippers demonstrating outside parliament.

The Dorset MPs voted as follows, and we commend the first two on the list for their good sense:

For: Christopher Chope (Christchurch); Richard Drax (Dorset South). Against: Oliver Letwin (Dorset West); Robert Walter (Dorset North); Tobias Ellwood (Bournemouth East); Conor Burns (Bournemouth West); Annette Brooke (Dorset Mid & Poole North); Robert Syms (Poole).

For the record those voting for the motion numbered 81 Conservatives, 19 Labour, 8 Democratic Unionist, 1 LibDem, 1 Green, and 1 Independent. Congratulations to all of these 111 who must have listened to their constituents.

There is so much going on at present with UKIP policies being applauded in some of the press, disarray caused by the Euro and Eurosceptic noises – however genuine – being made in many quarters. It is a great time for UKIP to grow and mature. The Conservative Eurosceptics must surely now realise that their leadership will never in a million years take them out of the EU, and strive in vain to repatriate only a very limited number of competences. Many are joining UK such as the high profile Lord Hesketh, former Conservative Party Treasurer, Minister of State and Chief Whip in the House of Lords. Indeed we are pleased to welcome several very warmly to our local branches. However we also need the MPs who profess to be sceptical to come on board at this time. We in UKIP do say we are not Eurosceptics, because there is no doubting our loathing of the EU project but our love of Europe – we have no scepticism – we want out and a return to democracy – we are Euloathers! Will the MPs make their stance as clear as that? BBC Radio 4 has found that according to Conservative Party insiders, two-thirds of Conservative MPs would like to renegotiate the UK's relationship with Europe. Is it time for them to move for the censure of their leaders?

Mr Cameron's self-inflicted woe continues. Wolfgang Schäuble, the German finance minister, indicated that Britain should not be demanding the repatriation of powers from Brussels during the eurozone crisis. Schäuble, who took part in a question and answer session with academics at Chatham House, left some of his London audience with the impression that Germany did not believe that Britain would have any bargaining chips in the negotiations. His apparent remarks prompted alarm bells in Westminster and Whitehall because Cameron told the 1922 committee in July that the eurozone crisis would give Britain a golden opportunity to repatriate powers. The social and employment laws handed over by Tony Blair, when Britain signed up to the social chapter in 1997, were top of Cameron's list. He may as well rip the list up and stop pretending he has the power!

Did you know that eurosceptic MP Philip Hollobone (Con., Kettering) introduced a bill last July to repeal the European Communities Act 1972, and it is up for its Second Reading on 20th January? As it is a Private Member's Bill it stands as much chance of success as the referendum debate. The suggestion is to contact your MP to support it. It is interesting to note that the weekly bulletin of Lords and Commons activities, and Parliament clerks mailing lists have all managed to avoid mention of it. It was not even been mentioned during the referendum debate. Curious.

Roger Helmer, Conservative MEP, is standing down at the end of December. Shame he is not using the occasion to move to UKIP and keep his seat. This would have maintained the status quo from when D C Bannerman jumped ship earlier this year. Fair exchange is no robbery!

Why don't we use the same tactic that the EU uses on us? Make them discuss the referendum again and again by voting again and again till they get it right? The new version of the petition is up and running already – here is the link! <http://alturl.com/3zmmw>. Let's make it 200,000 this time round!

Jeremy Nieboer in collaboration with Professor Tim Congdon has produced this excellent and timely article.

Why is the Eurozone in crisis? In a jurisdiction which has one central government, one currency and one central bank the credit of the government depends on its ability to borrow from the central bank in its own currency. The government holding the coercive power of the State ensures that its securities are honoured and bank deposits repaid.

This power is virtually unlimited. If the rate of increase in central bank money is too rapid this will result in depreciation of deposits and government securities in real value but not in nominal amount - there is no 'default'.

In the Eurozone there 17 governments but no central government. Nothing was provided for in Maastricht as to defined responsibilities of the ECB as lender of last resort to governments and banks. In the Eurozone responsibility for deposit protection is with the individual national governments and not with the ECB and beyond it with central government – there is no such government. Without a Eurozone government it is impossible to set the criteria for tax and spend policy and monetary growth which are essential to maintain the stability of any currency as a medium of exchange.

In the period to 2008 Eurozone banks did not need to borrow heavily from the ECB since they could borrow on the global inter-bank market including from central banks in leading Asian economies. So not only were such banks able for fund domestic private lending but also to buy Eurozone government securities. The shutdown of the inter-bank market in late 2007 revealed the black hole in entire Euro project – the absence of a lender of last resort backed by central government. ECB facilities to banks were cut off for fear of an uncontrollable expansion of the ECB's balance sheet. Assets were thus sold by banks starting with low quality assets including Greek government bonds. This in turn caused a rise in the cost of borrowing for Greece and then Ireland and Portugal (PIGs).

The only institution that governments and banks in the Eurozone can appeal to is the ECB. But the ECB is not permitted to lend on overdraft to governments. Nor can it lend to banks without limit as this would cause an explosion of the monetary base and risk of major inflation. Nor can it have 80% of its assets in loans to PIGs with only 20% of Eurozone GDP.

Sudden massive recapitalisation of the banks with the higher capital-asset ratios under EU and Basle rules will cause a grave loss in money growth – essential for return to long term stability. That was the lesson of 2008/9. Only real economic growth can achieve this – not further debt in whatever form.

There is no resolution of the crisis that does not establish a central bank acting as banker to government and to banks. This can only be done in the Eurozone by political union or by the individual member states restoring such regimes – that is by leaving the Euro. It is a project that is doomed.

You may be interested to know of the existence of an organisation that has created a United Future World Currency. They have been holding a competition to create such a coin involving 1000 schools around the world. They have now produced them in both silver and gold. Ever heard of Mode 4? No, we thought not! Mode 4 concessions are included in all EU trade deals such as Doha. It allows transnational corporations to move temporary migrant workers across borders, as 'trade'. Few EU countries have signed up to it but of course the UK has, taking 40% of the EU total, with unlimited numbers. Wages paid are the lowest possible, undercutting the UK workforce, and they do not pay National Insurance contributions. The UK/Eu is currently working on a trade deal with India which will allow large numbers to come to the UK. Once in they can even change the company for whom they work. Mode 4 has not come to public attention because of secrecy and spin. It is discriminatory against small national businesses [cheaper wages] threatening their very survival. This also means a slower UK recovery, loss of Tax & NI to the exchequer; wages go overseas, increased UK welfare bill and loss of skills amongst the UK workforce. Big business once again rules and Callmedave has not even told you.

We have mentioned foreign aid before in newsletters. This however puts things in perspective: France £40m, Germany £35 m...UK £785 m and rising. No further comment necessary.
