

Recent UKIP events organised in June by local branches were major successes. At an open meeting in Greyfriars Community Centre in Ringwood chaired by New Forest West Chairman Ann Vasilescu, Steven Woolfe, UKIP City of London spokesman, made an immaculate speech on the subject of how the EU is damaging our economy. Ian Linney explained how EU membership was not a matter of left or right. Corrie Williams, whom we saw last at the Dorset North AGM, expanded on the indoctrination of a nation by EU propaganda in our schools. All took questions afterwards which were answered clearly and fully. And 'Yes', Iona Dingles' cakes were indeed the best cupcakes we have ever experienced!

Bournemouth West UKIP organised a special open meeting with one of UK's best economist, UKIP's own Prof. Tim Congdon at the Wessex Hotel in Bournemouth. The professor gave us chapter and verse on how we did not need the EU at all, warning that a potential referendum would have to be a straight In/Out option – something he felt we would be unlikely to be offered. He emphasised that all the 160 countries in the world outside of the EU are continuing to survive and in the most part prosper whilst not being members of the EU! So why do we so need to be in it?

DVDs of both these meetings are available at modest cost from the new Chairman of Bournemouth West UKIP, Marilyn Day. Ring 01202 767834 or email maday@town88.orangehome.co.uk. Marilyn has taken over the branch from Pam McAlester, now chairman of the UKIP's S.W. Chairman's Committee, who wishes to concentrate on the training days mentioned in last month's newsletters. Congratulations to both on their appointments.

We would like to highlight two changes in events shown previously in the diary. The venue for the Godfrey Bloom afternoon on the 15th September has been changed from the Wessex Hotel to the Durlley Dean Hotel both in Bournemouth. Sadly the summer BBQ being organised by Mid-Dorset and Poole UKIP has had to be cancelled. The venue in Lytchett Matravers is being sold and the new owners are unlikely to entertain similar arrangements to those that the Turner family had been kind enough to offer us. A suitable alternative venue has not been found.

Live within about 3 miles of Longham near Ferndown? Better still do you live in it? The Town Council is looking to co-opt a councillor for this ward. There are three seats but just one vacancy, one of the current two being held by UKIP's Peter Lucas. Find 10 people from Longham to back you and you could be the fourth UKIP councillor in this council. Details and help from John Baxter or <http://www.ferndown.gov.uk/news/ferndownnews.asp?id=32>. The job is not onerous but regular attendance to the usually evening meetings is recommended! A modest remuneration exists.

A massive number of motorcycles formed a protest rally on the M3 on 24th June, attracting brief but clear coverage on the BBC TV news. Nationwide numerous other similar protests under the umbrella EU Hands off Biking were carried out, organised by the Motorcycle Action Group (MAG). The riders are objecting to the EU's plans to prevent modifications being made to motorcycles. Voting for this in the EUP will take place later this year. Find out more from <http://alturl.com/Sr54z>. If you know of bikers who are unaware of this indefensible proposed legislation do let them know of it, and particularly of the EU's part in it. The future of motorcycling will be very different and more public freedoms will be removed if this pointless drivel is successfully implemented.

The future of British policing is entering a worrying phase. With the numbers of genuine police ostensibly being cut to save vast sums of money an increasing list of authorities are encouraging the privatisation of many of the services they traditionally carry out. Companies such as G4S, currently handling Olympic security, have an opportunity to tender to take over many of the police's responsibilities. The list of policing activities up for grabs includes investigating crimes, detaining suspects, developing cases, responding to and investigating incidents, supporting victims and witnesses, managing high-risk individuals, managing intelligence, managing engagement with the public, as well as more traditional back-office functions such as managing forensics, providing legal services, managing the vehicle fleet, finance and human resources. This list may not be definitive. This backdoor privatisation is a particularly worrying practice as the companies that win the contracts may not even be British. Once again the EU is trying to fix something that is not broken with a model that is open to widespread corruption and foreign interference, especially that from Brussels. The Police Federation has warned that the service is being undermined by creeping privatisation.

We were heartened recently to see the Burmese politician Aung San Suu Kyi in Britain. This brave woman was welcomed warmly by politicians of all parties and even addressed both Houses of Parliament. It must be a very strange and novel thing for her British hosts to observe – a person who believes in democracy – such an alien philosophy to them all! A slightly framed widow standing up unwaveringly for many years against a fascist, all-powerful government. She is a shining example to us all in UKIP as we battle against the iniquitous fascist, all-powerful EU.

Conservative Cllr Lee Barney from Milton Keynes has joined UKIP, disgusted at the Tories under Cameron. Feeling they have strayed so far from their traditional beliefs he is firmly against the cuts in our military. “UKIP ... offer a fresh alternative to the tired parties, their half truths and spin. Their approach to independence from Europe is a sound policy and they, like I, believe in a strong Independent Britain with a strong Military ready to meet the concerns of the future.” Family man Lee is a former soldier and runs an IT Security business and is a school governor. Welcome to your new home, Councillor.

We have previously mentioned in our newsletters a nuclear alternative to the potentially dangerous traditional reactors. We now learn that China will accelerate the use of new-energy sources such as nuclear energy and put an end to blind expansion in industries such as solar energy and wind power in 2012. Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao says in a government report that safe nuclear does exist, and China is leading the way with radiation-free Thorium. Thorium is available cheaply in Cornwall in vast quantities. The so-called Green party has not mentioned it as a safe alternative and continue to trash the idea of nuclear power for this country. With no dangerous residue this is reputed to be 100% safe and way more green than miles of imported short-lived wind turbines with which they wish to defile our country.

The recent two day Brussels summit attended by Cameron and other EU dignitaries has been hailed a success but what is not stated is that it will have major implications for the UK. The City of London financial institutions will lose out considerably to its European opponents. As the City is highly profitable and keeps our country financially afloat any reduction will have implications for our very survival. It is a black day for our future, but fully approved by Cameron.

Next time you are bored to tears with watching the repetitive BBC24 channel we recommend you tune into RT [Russia Today]. By doing this you will actually find out what is going on in the world and even in the UK. If you are lucky, and the odds are good, you will stumble across Nigel Farage or William Dartmouth amongst others giving rounded view of the news. It is refreshingly different and does not follow the EU doctrine or government propaganda.

Ever wondered where an item originated? Many items especially from the EU do not show a country but do show a barcode. The starting numbers of the barcode will show the country of registration. Here are some: 00-13 = USA + Canada; 30-37 = France; 40-44 = Germany; 49 = Japan; 50 = UK; 57 = Denmark; 64 = Finland; 73 = Sweden; 76 = Switzerland & Liechtenstein; 84 = Spain; 91-92 = Austria; 93 = Australia; 480 = Philippines; 539 = Ireland; 569 = Iceland; 590 = Poland; 594 = Romania; 599 = Hungary; 628 = Saudi-Arabia; 740-745 = Central America; 890 = India.

This month Jeremy Nieboer discusses the significance of Germany 1923, 1930 and today:

The perception that hardship bearing down on individuals is due to coercive action by a remote foreign power can lead to serious civil unrest. We should not be reluctant to look again at the world crisis of 1930 – 1933 for lessons in understanding what is happening in Greece, Spain, Portugal and Italy.

The German folk memory still retains the appalling consequences of the demands by the French for reparations for the damage caused in WW1. To enforce payment Poincaré, the French premier, occupied the Ruhr in 11 January 1923. But his central concern was not German defaults on coal and timber deliveries but the sanctity of the Versailles treaty which imposed on Germany severe penalties, loss of territory and privation. Poincaré was not himself as supportive of reparations as he was of preserving the Treaty fearing that German breach of its terms would result in wholesale assault on it.

The demand for reparations so enforced led directly to the German hyper inflation of 1923 which remains a scar in its people’s memory. So appalling were its consequences that when economic crisis impaled the German nation in 1932 its people were ready to accept an explanation of its causes that was wholly false. It was Hitler’s success in ascribing the people’s sufferings to what he asserted were the crippling terms of the Versailles settlement that accounted for the wave of electoral support leading to his Chancellorship in January 1933.

Yet none of this was true. The 1930/33 crisis was not cause by hyper inflation or by the Versailles treaty or indeed by the Wall Street crash. It was caused by bank failures resulting from severe monetary contraction, illiquidity and panic. Indeed the banking crisis of late 1930 owes much to the fear engendered by failure of Bank of United States - itself the result of panic. In the USA 125 banks were suspended during 1931 alone.

Yet the perception of the harrowing effects of the 1923 hyperinflation is what dominated in 1930/33 during Hitler’s democratic progress to power. We can all see that it still dominates German policy. It is this that determines their view of the Euro and the conduct of Eurozone countries. All that the Germans are requiring is that Greece and those states confine expenditure to revenues, debt to a sustainable proportion of GDP and that their peoples should pay their taxes. This is not austerity but the imperative restraint of insupportable gratification.

But when seen from Athens and, by extension, Rome and Madrid, the cause of their privations is now being depicted as due to constraints imposed by a dominant foreign power whose leaders were not elected by the Greek people, who cannot be displaced by any Greek vote and whose demands cannot be resisted.

Such a victimised mental bias is very dangerous. It blinds reason. A state of mind suborned by such distortions of reality is one that history has shown us can bring disaster and the fear of catastrophe.

What the media is saying:

- Commenting on Tory plans to reintroduce 'O' levels The Sun says "Nick Clegg's gang moan they weren't consulted. Left-wing teaching unions are apoplectic. Might that be because tougher exams would force dud teachers to raise their game?"
- Serbian Dutch newspaper Het Financieele Dagblad reports that EU finance ministers will abandon proposals for a financial transaction tax. A stamp duty which would apply to buyers of stock is proposed. However:
- French President Francois Hollande announced during a press conference in Mexico that a financial transaction tax would be introduced in 2013. He was evasive on the details of the tax, saying that it would be done "either within reinforced European cooperation, or between countries of several continents". He estimated that the revenue from the tax would be "fairly large" and that its rate would be determined "by those countries concerned". A Le Monde report.
- The Telegraph reports that David Cameron believes that people can be "infuriated" by "European interfering" as he explains his support for an announcement that the UK will follow Belgium in printing a UK national symbol on its driving licenses in addition to EU symbols. [Shame it is not 'in place of'. That would be a step forward. Ed]
- Launching the cross-party Better Together campaign in Edinburgh, which involves Labour, the Lib Dems and the Conservatives, Mr Darling said that Scotland, through family, economic and cultural friendship, is stronger in the UK. BBC.
- 'Getting a "better settlement for Britain," while remaining an EU member, is fantasy at best and a gross deception at worst. We must work on an entirely new relationship, which Brian Binley MP and I discuss in a recently released paper. We conclude that a Swiss-style relationship, based on free trade and mutually beneficial bilateral agreements outside the EU, was the most promising way forward.' Ruth Lea in CityAM.com
- Bild reports that for the first time, Germany's public debt liabilities has crossed the €2 trillion threshold, even before the Bundestag voted on the establishment of the eurozone bailout fund, the ESM, which will add a further €190bn.
- Jenns Weidmann says his vision for a fiscal union consists of an automatic loss of sovereignty for countries that breach the fiscal rules. The countries need to agree to strict budgetary and fiscal rules that must be supervised and enforced by a European authority, the Bundesbank president said recently. "In case a country does not comply with the budgetary rules the national sovereignty would automatically be transferred to a European level so that meeting the targets can be guaranteed". The European authority would then be able to impose either higher taxes or spending cuts that it would be able to enforce against the parliamentary majority of the concerned country. As reported in the theyenguy.wordpress.com
- The EU should scrap the annual Declaration of Assurance (DAS) on the EU's accounts prepared by the Court of Auditors, (ECA) says its former president Jan Karlsson. Karlsson was speaking during a public hearing organised by the [EU] parliament's budgetary control committee, responsible for overseeing the work of the Luxembourg-based Court of Auditors. President of the court between 1999 and 2001, Karlsson claimed that the exercise, which has seen the audits for the last 17 years fail to give the EU's accounts a clean bill of health, is "misunderstood" by the public who "perceived the exercise as an investigation into corruption in the European institutions." From a report in OpenEurope.
